URBAN:LIST [INSIDERS] SYDNEY

North Sydney is suddenly feeling a lot closer...

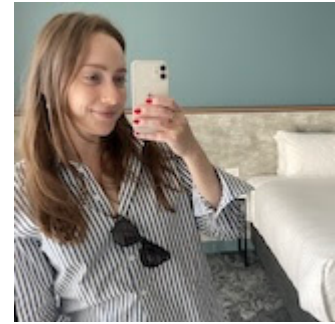

I'm sure you've heard that the Sydney Metro City line is finally up and running? I'm excited about this new way of crossing the harbour to hit the booming food scene in North Sydney, including at Victoria Cross itself (like Marrickville Pork Roll, Mary's and Dopa Donburi), which is now just three minutes from Barangaroo.

Steps out of the station there are new, need-to-try spots like Antica Dining and the Walker Street precinct (with the colour-changing Japanese restaurant Genzo and all-day bakery Sol Bread and Wine). You can even jump back on the City line to Crows Nest to check out the triple-decker Japanese venue that houses Ramen Auru, Ichiro's Bar and Yakitori Yurippi.

Know of other eateries that just became more accessible thanks to the Metro? Let me know.

INSIDER INTEL

Newtown's New French Restaurant Opens This Week

On the mezzanine level of King Street's Odd Culture, Bistro Grenier is a standalone offering giving the venue's kitchen team a chance to sink their tongs into playful French fare. Expect baked scallops, côtelette de porc and a maple syrup pudding, plus French digestifs and liqueurs.

Keith Urban Is Coming To Marrickville

The Aussie king of country music will hit the Bob Hawke Beer & Leisure Centre on 3 September to celebrate the launch of his new album, High. He'll play some tunes and there'll be a conversation with The Betoota Advocate. Pre-order the album and enter the ballot for tickets here.

Pino's Has Opened In Sydney's South

Beloved Alexandria restaurant Pino's Vino e Cucina now has a second location overlooking the water in Cronulla. The beautiful restaurant takes inspiration from the landscape of Puglia, with a menu that's focused on seafood.
